

I strongly support a diverse and localized media with strong (and well-enforced) limits on media ownership in local markets. The foundation of democracy is a free media, and the freedom we require is not limited to a lack of government censorship, but also includes a sufficient diversity of views to counterbalance the inevitable corporate self-censorship inherent in the profit-centered media model.